Imitation of an architectural design (or even elements within the design) can reduce the value of the design and can dilute the reputation of the architect. For this reason, architects should protect their designs - their intellectual property - with the same zeal that they protect their other forms of property.

Good architecture can be found across the world. The architectural guides by DOM publishers are far more than just studious architectural reference books - they are expedition guides into the unknown and give way to new perspectives on a sometimes foreign world. Furthermore, they help to understand that the architecture of a city is more than the sum of its attractions.
