The guide focuses on the short-mini case studies that are contained within all CIPS examination papers, but also provides a short focus on how to approach the major case study for Supply Chain Management in Practice, which is the integrative unit for the CIPS Level 6 Graduate Diploma in Purchasing and Supply, which can be found on page 11, in Part 2. 2.0 About the CIPS examination case studies The case study is a brief overview of a business situation. The purpose of the case study is to allow you to demonstrate your ability to analyse a purchasing and supply situation under examination conditions. To do this effectively you need to know, understand and have experience of the application of the relevant theory. This is an active process, not a memory exercise, so practice on a range of past mini-case studies is essential.
