We often get calls from customers looking for an air guide, sometimes called the belly pan, splash pan, skid plate or lower engine cover. Since many Volvos are missing this part, many people don't think they need one, but the guide plays an important role in maintaining the longevity of your Volvo's powerplant.

Interestingly this shows for Non-turbo 70 series. I remember in Europe many of my older Volvos (940/240/140) had under engine covers to keep all the crap out. In that climate, it was fine, but I'd think somewhere much hotter it may cause engines to over heat, although #31 does look like another additional air guide but not sure where it would fit?
