Balzer Designs: Art Journal Every Day

I've found that these days, the backing paper, spread out to protect a rug quickly bought at IKEA, is where most of the magic is happening. There's something about not being restricted to the side of a journal page or spread, yet the art, the process, and eventual journaling are all an echo of the work I've done inside books for over a decade.

I have saved many of my journals over the years. Quite honestly, my most recent journal needed to be dusted off for this post. My last entry was a drawing of a TV cabinet I wanted someone to make for me for my old house, which was four years ago. (Sometimes, good habits fall by the wayside, especially when you have a house full of teens and tweens.
